Broadcasting Cablecasting

Yearbook 1984

The 1984 Broadcasting/Cablecasting Yearbook shares with its predecessors the distinction of being the most comprehensive directory to the Fifth Estate. It covers the history and continuing growth of every field in the industry. To acquaint readers with the structure of the Yearbook, and to assist in locating information, the editors have provided general descriptions of each of the nine major sections: The Fifth Estate, Radio, Television, Cable, Satellites, Programing, Advertising and Marketing, Technology, and Professional Services. In addition, the editorial index, expanded to be even more inclusive, begins on the following page. The general index is followed by an index to advertisers in the 1984 Yearbook. These are grouped according to service. Finally, each of the nine sections has a complete index on the first page of the section.

Section A— begins with "The Fifth Estate," the history and evolution of the broadcasting media. The "Short Course in Broadcasting" (A-2) provides a capsulized summary of the industry. A description of emerging technologies begins on page A-6, reviewing recent and ongoing developments in broadcast technology. A subsection on Law and Regulation follows on page A-8, covering the Federal Communications Commission. It includes an organization chart of the FCC, names of its staff members, an extract of its principal rules and a guide to station application procedure. Government agencies of interest to the Fifth Estate are listed in a directory beginning on page A-33. A list of state Cable regulatory agencies follows. The Group Ownership directory, page A-35, is a list of individuals and companies with multiple station holdings. Section A concludes with the directory of newspaper/magazine crossownership and crossownership by station.

Section B— The Radio section of the Yearbook begins with the directory of AM and FM stations in the United States, followed by stations in U.S. territories, Canada, FM stations in the United States, followed by stations in U.S. territories, Canada, Mexico and the Caribbean. Information on U.S. International Radio, the Voice of America, American Forces Radio and Television Service (AFRTS), and Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty (RFE/RL) is included here. Listings provide call letters, address, telephone number, programing information, and names of principal executives. Next, a directory lists all counties of license with county or market population figures. Cross-reference lists of AM and FM stations by call letters and frequencies for the U.S. and Canada follow this directory. Following these lists is the table of FM assignments. This section concludes with information on world radio and television, including stations and transmitters used for international and armed forces programs.

Section C— This is the Television section of the Yearbook. The first part, "The Facilities of Television," begins with detailed directories of TV stations, addresses, telephone numbers, names of principal executives, with cross-references to the appropriate ADI's (Areas of Dominant Influence). Among the other features of this section are lists of U.S. and Canadian stations by call letters and channels, the table of TV assignments, a complete history of TV station transfers, a list of pending TV station applications, and information on experimental TV and subscription TV stations. There is also a section on Low Power TV (LPTV), listing LPTV grants, licensees, addresses and principal executives. The second part of Section C, "The Television Marketplace," describes the commercial aspects of the medium, and has as its primary feature the "ADI Market Atlas," a 74-page section showing each of the 209 ADI's according to Arbitron Television. It is complete with coverage maps, and other important market rankings. Concluding the section are tables of market ranking by size, markets by Nielson Marketing Research, and network delivery variations by market.

Section D— The Cable section of the Yearbook contains detailed information on cable systems throughout the United States and Canada. The "Anatomy of Cable Regulation" opens the section with an outline of federal cable television rules. On page D-3, "A Short Course in Cable" provides a concise summary of the industry. The cable listings provide the system name, address and phone number, names of principal executives, area served, type of TV market, statistical data, channel usage, information about pay cable and other types of programing, and ownership. Also in this section are a directory of Multiple System Operators (MSO's) on page D-296, a list of Broadcasters in Cable, a list of newspapers using cable TV, a chart of the Top-50 MSO's, and a chart of cable penetration by market.

Section E— The section on Satellites begins with the list of satellites currently used by North American owners and operators. Included in the section are lists of satellite owners and operators, resale and common carriers, programers and networks. Next are listings for direct broadcast satellites, basic and pay cable program services, and superstations.

Section F— This is the Programing section of the Yearbook. First is a directory of producers, distributors, and production services, followed by a list of international program producers. Addresses, telephone numbers, and names of principal executives accompany the listings. Other program-related material includes sections on music licensing groups, closed circuit TV, and major awards. Major network directories with radio and TV affiliates begin on page F-31. Next are sections on public broadcasting; Canadian networks; regional radio and TV networks and news services. Section F concludes with radio station listings according to formats and special programing.

Section G— The Advertising and Marketing section presents directories of advertising agencies handling major radio and TV accounts, media/planning services, U.S. and Canadian station representatives, and Industry Standard Commercial Identification System. Listings include address, telephone number, principal executives and branch offices. The section concludes with tables that provide information about radio and TV audiences, audience composition, and set usage.

Section H— This, the "Technology" section, begins with a list of U.S. and international equipment manufacturers and distributors, and continues with listings of frequency measuring services, videotext operations, teletext operations, videotext and teletext software and hardware suppliers, automated-channel suppliers, broadcast automation systems, and a directory of companies providing mobile production services. These listings include addresses, telephone numbers, and names of principal executives. Next are lists of common carriers including land line, microwave & multipoint distribution services. On page 55 a chart shows the growth of broadcasting, and on page 56 a chart shows television and radio set sales from 1958-1981. The last part of Section H begins on page 57 with the 1984 Buyer's Guide, the yellow pages, a commercial directory to both equipment and broadcast services.

Section I— is divided into three parts—Professional Services, Associations, and Broadcast Education. Part one provides listings of brokers and consultants, station financing firms, research services, technical consultants, law firms and attorneys in communications law, public relations services, talent agents, and employment services. Part two, Associations, begins on page I-39 with the National Association of Broadcasters and includes trade organizations, professional associations and societies, and unions. Broadcast Education, part three, opens on page I-60 with broadcasting schools. The section continues with reviews of recently published books related to the Fifth Estate. Section I concludes with a list of colleges and universities offering degrees and courses in radio and television.

This ultra-sophisticated Ward
audio system for the Post Production
Control Room at Group W's, KPIX, San Francisco, is the third of a series operating at their new station facilities.

Using top of the line Ward-Beck Series
460 modular components, its features include an integral routing switcher with alpha-numeric dot-matrix displays to indicate the status of the 48-input/24-output configuration.

This particular unit is employed on program post-production for Group W's highly successful, nationally syndicated PM Magazine.

A Glossary of Terms Used in 1984 Yearbook

Basic cable service—Package of cable programing provided to subscribers without additional fee.

Cable television—System that transmits original programing, and programing of broadcast television stations, to consumers over wired network (see page A-6).

Clear channel—AM radio station allowed to dominate its frequency with up to 50 kw of power; their signals are generally protected for distance of up to 750 miles at night.

Coaxial cable—Cable with several common axis lines under protective sheath used for television signal transmissions.

CC—Closed captioning. Method of transmitting textual information over television channel's vertical blanking interval; transmissions are deciphered with decoders; decoded transmissions appear as text superimposed over television image.

CED—Capacitance electronic disk (RCA videodisk).

Common carrier—Telecommunications company that provides communications transmission services to public.

DBS—Direct broadcast satellite. High powered satellite authorized to broadcast direct to homes (see page A-7).

Domsat—Domestic satellite (see page A-6).

Downlink—Earth station used to receive signals from satellites.

Earth station—Equipment used for transmitting or receiving satellite communications.

EFT—Electronic funds transfer.

EM—Electronic mail.

ENG—Electronic news gathering.

ETV—Educational television.

Footprint—Area on earth within which satellite's signal can be received.

Geostationary orbit—Orbit 22,300 miles above earth's equator where satellites circle earth at same rate earth rotates.

Ghz—Gigahertz. 1,000 megahertz.

HDTV—High-definition television (see page A-7).

Headend—Facility in cable system from which all signals originate. (Local and distant television stations, and satellite programing, are picked up and amplified for retransmission through system.)

Hertz—A unit of frequency equal to one cycle per second. One kilohertz is 1,000 hertz; one megahertz is one million hertz; one gigahertz is one billion hertz.

HUT—Households using television.

ITFS—Instructional Television Fixed Service (see page A-7).

Khz—Kilohertz (see Hertz).

LED—Light emitting diode. Type of semiconductor that lights up when activated by voltage.

LO—Local origination channel.

LPTV—Low-power television (see page A-7).

LV—LaserVision (optical videodisk).

MATV—Master antenna television. Delivery method for pay programing to multi-unit dwellings.

MDS—Multipoint distribution service (see page A-7).

Mhz—Megahertz (see Hertz).

Microwave—Frequencies above 1,000 mhz.

MSO—Multiple cable system operator.

NTSC—National Television System Committee. Committee that recommended current American standard for color TV.

PCM—Pulse code modulation. Conversion of voice signals into digital code.

PPV—Pay-per-view.

PSA—Public service announcement.

PTV—Public television.

RCC—Radio common carrier. Common carriers whose major businesses include radio paging and mobile telephone services.

SCA—Subsidiary communications authorizations. Authorizations granted to FM broadcasters for using subcarriers on their channels for other communications services.

Shortwave—Transmissions on frequencies of 6-25 mhz.

SHF—Super high frequency.

SMATV—Satellite master antenna television (see page A-7).

STV—Subscription television (see page A-6).

Superstation—Local TV station whose signal is retransmitted via satellite to cable systems beyond reach of over-the-air signal.

Tariff—Common carrier's statement describing services it offers and rates it charges.

Teletext—One-way electronic publishing service (see page A-7).

Translator—Broadcast station that rebroadcasts signals of other stations without originating its own programing.

Transponder—Satellite transmitter/receiver that picks up signals transmitted from earth, translates them into new frequency and amplifies them before retransmitting them back to ground.

UHF—Ultra high frequency.

Uplink—Earth station used for transmitting to satellite.

VCR—Videocassette recorder.

VHF—Very high frequency.

Videotext—Two-way interactive service that uses either two-way cable or telephone lines to connect a central computer to a television screen (see page A-7).

VTR—Video-tape recorder.

DIMENSION (W x H x D) 37-1/2" x 11" x 30-1/4" (953 mm x 279.6 mm x 769 mm)

Hum and Noise are measured with a −6dB/octave filter at 12.47kHz; equivalent to a 20 kHz filter with infinite dB/octave attenuation.
*OdB is referenced to 0.775V RMS.
- Sensitivity is the lowest level that will produce an output of −10dB (245mV), or the nominal output level when the unit is set to maximum gain.
- All specifications subject to change without notice.

The specs speak for themselves. But they can't tell you how natural, logical and easy the RM1608 is to work. All the controls and switches are logically arranged to help you get the job done quickly and accurately.

And in the tradition of Yamaha's sound reinforcement mixers, the RM1608 sets new standards of reliability as well as ease of operation. passed in 1982, the FCC was cut back to five commissioners in June 1983.

FCC Broadcast Regulation

One of the FCC's major activities is the regulation of broadcasting. This has three phases.

The first is the allocation of space in the radio frequency spectrum to the broadcast services and to many nonbroadcast services which also must be accommodated. In view of the tremendously increased use of radio technology in recent decades, the competing demands for frequencies are among the commission's most pressing problems. Fortunately, as technology has advanced, frequencies higher and higher in the spectrum have become usable. Apart from the frequencies used for broadcasting, frequencies in other portions of the spectrum are allocated for "broadcast auxiliary" use by remote pickup and other transmitters auxiliary to main broadcast stations (see Auxiliary Broadcast Services).

The second phase of regulation is the assignment of stations in each service within the allocated frequency bands, with specific location, frequency and power. The chief consideration, although by no means the only one, is to avoid interference with other stations on the same channel (frequency) or channels adjacent in the spectrum. If an application is granted, the applicant for a new station or for changed facilities receives a construction permit. Later, when the station is built and it is capable of operating as proposed, a license to operate is issued.

The third phase is regulation of existing stations: inspection to see that stations are operating in accordance with FCC rules and technical provisions of their authorizations, modifying the authorizations when necessary, assigning station call letters, licensing transmitter operators, processing requests to assign the station license to another party or transfer control of the licensee corporation, and processing applications for renewal of license. At renewal time, the commission reviews the station's record to see if it is operating in the public interest.

The Nature of American Broadcasting

Although educational and other noncommercial stations share the airwaves, the American broadcasting system for the most part is a commercial system. In this respect it is supported by revenues from those who advertise goods or services to the audience. Advertising messages are presented as commercial "spot announcements" before, during, and after programs, or as a part of "sponsored" programs.

Broadcast stations are licensed to serve the public interest, convenience and necessity. By law, each license must contain a statement that the licensee does not have any right to operate the station or use the frequency beyond the term of license. The maximum term of license for a radio station is seven years; the maximum term of license for a television station is five years.

Under requirements of the Communications Act, applicants must be legally, technically and financially qualified, and they must show that their proposed operation would be in the public interest. They must be citizens of the United States. Corporations with alien officers or directors or with more than one-fifth of the capital stock controlled by foreign interests may not be licensed.

Penalties for broadcast station violations, depending upon the degree of seriousness, range from reprimands, fines up to $10,000, and short-term probationary licenses to denial of license renewal, or even license revocation. Cease-and-desist orders may also be issued.

In 1965, the commission provided for public inspection of certain records of broadcast stations in the communities they serve. These are mainly duplicate copies of records in the public files of the commission in Washington, and include licenses, records of ownership, applications to the FCC and related material, network affiliation contracts and employment reports.

The commission is forbidden by law from censoring programs. The Communications Act, Section 326, states: "Nothing in this Act shall be understood or construed to give the commission the power of censorship over the radio communications of signals transmitted by any radio station, and no regulation or condition shall be promulgated or fixed by the commission which shall interfere with the right of free speech by means of radio communication."

Fairness—The commission has held that when a station presents one viewpoint on a controversial public issue, the public interest requires that reasonable opportunity be afforded for the presentation of opposing

A short course in broadcasting ☐ 1984

There were 9,320 radio stations operating in the United States at the end of 1983. Of these, 4,726 were commercial AM's, 3,490 were commercial FM's and 1,104 were noncommercial FM's. There were 1,149 operating television stations: 536 commercial VHF's, 334 commercial UHF's, 107 noncommercial VHF's and 172 noncommercial UHF's. Most commercial TV's are network affiliated; approximately 250 operate as independents.

No single entity may own more than seven stations in each service (AM, FM or TV). In TV, no more than five may be VHF. No owner may have two stations of the same service in the same community. No owner of three VHF's in the top 50 markets may purchase other VHF's in the top 50 without a showing of compelling public interest. Newspaper owners may no longer purchase broadcast properties in the same market, nor may radio station owners acquire TV stations there, nor TV owners radio outlets. TV stations may no longer acquire cable TV franchises in the same city, and networks may not own cable systems at all.

In 1982, according to estimates by the U.S. Department of Commerce, commercial broadcasting had total revenues of approximately $14.9 billion. Television accounted for $10.9 billion (73.1%) of revenues; radio, for approximately $4.0 billion (26.9%). Public broadcasting had a 1982 income of $845.2 million—23.4% from the federal government.

In 1982 television billings for stations and networks amounted to $6,232,313,100 (national network), $3,342,148,800 (national non-network), and $2,578,302,500 (local), according to estimates by the Television Bureau of Advertising. The Radio Advertising Bureau estimated radio billings for stations and networks were $221,000,000 (national network), $884,000,000 (national non-network), and $3,365,000,000 (local).

There are more than 83 million U.S. homes (98% of all homes) with television sets, about 50% of which have more than one set. About 76 million sets are color. It is estimated that about 96% of TV homes can receive UHF signals, and that about 35% are linked with cable systems, according to Arbitron Television. (Further data on cable TV appears in "A short course in cable, 1984" on page D-3.) There are an estimated 470 million radio sets in the U.S., 347 million (74%) of them in homes and 123 million (26%) out of homes.

The average American home watches TV for seven hours and two minutes a day, according to A.C. Nielsen statistics for the calendar year 1983. And the latest study by The Roper Organization (commissioned by the Television Information Office) shows that 65% of the U.S. public turns to TV as the source of most of its news, and that 53% ranks it as the most believable news source.

The average 30-second prime-time network television announcement now costs $100,000 (spots on a top-rated series cost $200,000; low-rated spots average about $50,000). An estimated 104 million people watched the 1984 Super Bowl telecast. Thirty-second announcements during that event cost $450,000. Thirty-second announcements on individual TV stations range from $15,000 in top-rated specials in major markets to as low as $10 in the second-hundred markets. Radio spots cost from $750 or more in major markets to less than a dollar in small towns.

Armed Forces Radio and Television Service

AFRTS operates over 800 radio and television outlets located in more than 50 foreign countries, remote areas of Alaska, U.S. trusts, territories and possessions, and aboard Navy ships. Most of the land-based stations are grouped into regional AFRTS networks to serve specific geographical areas (for example, American Forces Network-Europe in Europe and American Forces Korea Network in Korea). These AFRTS networks and independent stations create their own individual radio and television program schedules from broadcast materials provided by the AFRTS Programing Center in Los Angeles. Some outlets are broadcast operations and some carried on closed circuit systems of various types. Domestic and Intelsat satellite service is leased on a 24 hour-a-day basis and provides real-time stateside radio and TV to certain overseas locations.

HQ AFRTS. AFRTS is the broadcast arm of the American Forces Information Service located at 1735 N. Lynn St., Arlington, Va. 22209. (202) 696-5284. Lieutenant Colonel Melvin W. Russell, asst dir, AFRTS/broadcast media; Major Lawrence Pollack, opns mgr.

AFRTS Programing Center-Los Angeles. 1016 N. McCadden Pl., Los Angeles 90038. (213) 467-3561. David Cole, dir; Lieutenant Colonel Bruce Eaton, deputy dir; Gerry Fry, dir of progmg; Vince Harris, industry liaison.

Radio City of License with County or Market Population

The following is an alphageographical listing of every city of license with a commercial radio station. The middle column is the county, and the last column is the population of the county. Population figures followed by an asterisk represent metropolitan markets which include more than one county. The figures are from the Bureau of the Census and Standard Rate and Data Service.

World Radio and Television

The following summarizes radio and television broadcasting around the world. Stations and transmitters used for international and armed forces programs are included. Transmitter counts for each country are for main transmitters and often include low power relays, repeaters, satellites and/or translators. Where current information is not available, radio set counts have been estimated by Broadcasting.

Note: Domestic radio stations in foreign countries often use shortwave and longwave frequencies, as well as the medium wave frequencies corresponding with the standard AM broadcast band in the U.S. Longwave (lw) frequencies below 500 khz are generally used in Europe, Africa, the Middle East, and Asiatic U.S.S.R. Medium wave (mw) frequencies are between 500 and 1600 khz and are used on all continents. Shortwave (sw) frequencies are between 1600 and 30,000 khz and are used for domestic broadcasting on all continents, especially in tropical areas. On long, medium, and shortwave, the mode of transmission is amplitude modulation (AM). Most foreign frequency modulation (FM) radio broadcasting is on the same frequencies as those used in the U.S., although some countries use a band between 60 and 88 mhz.

Unless shown as commercial (coml), government broadcasting activity identified below is without advertising. Some independent broadcasting organizations, such as the BBC, operate under statutory authority, and are so identified. Statutory, nongovernmental broadcasting may be supported by receiver license fees, advertising, subsidies, or a combination.

The ADI Market Atlas

The Area of Dominant Influence is a geographic market design that defines each television market exclusive of the others, based on measurable viewing patterns. Each market's ADI consists of all counties in which the home market stations receive a preponderance of viewing, and every county in the U.S. (excluding Hawaii and Alaska) is allocated exclusively to only one ADI—there is no overlap. The total of all ADI's represents the total television households in the U.S.

The ADI is a standard market definition. As a television buying tool it is a geographic and demographic means for maximum efficiency. As a station tool it has applications for sales, programing and promotion planning.

Following, in alphabetical order, are Arbitron Television's 209 ADI markets for 1983-84, with coverage maps for each; and county-by-county breakouts of TV households. Other data include the market's stations, and their cities of license, channel numbers and network affiliations.

Coverage maps show total survey areas in white, the ADI's themselves in light crosshatching, and Arbitron Metro Rating Areas in heavier crosshatching. The survey areas consist of all counties in which the home market stations are viewed to any significant extent, including via cable. The Metro Areas, usually conform to the U.S. Census Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas.

Supplementary markets do not meet Arbitron's criteria for having an ADI of their own; they are listed in this atlas next to the ADI of which they are a part.

A complete list of the supplementary markets appears on page C-134 and a cross-reference list for cities in a multi-city ADI on C-198.

Supplementary markets

The following supplementary markets have no ADI. Reports for these non-ADI markets may be produced in the November February and/or May surveys. Data on each market is listed in the surrounding atlas adjacent to the ADI in which it falls. TV household estimates for supplementary markets are nonadditive, since these markets are composed of counties which are a part of other markets' ADI's.

TV Markets by Nielsen Marketing Research Territory

Nielsen Marketing Research territory groupings are another standard way of reporting sales data. The following table ranks TV markets within each Nielsen Territory. This provides a yardstick for determining the number of spot markets needed to achieve a given coverage of a territory. For example, if the national media are not delivering sufficient advertising weight in New England, the planner will find that three TV markets (Boston, Hartford and Providence) contain almost 80% of the New England territory households. Or, he can use the table to get a better idea of how and what TV markets are needed to cover all of New England. Data is from special Nielsen Station Index tabulation based on a January 1984 estimate.

How Network Delivery Varies by Market

National advertisers use spot television to increase network advertising weight in specific markets to achieve a predetermined level. These market goals are derived from the advertising budget and the market's share of the brand's projected sales. Thus, a spot schedule is usually indicated where a market has an unusually high brand-sales potential, or where the network weight delivered for the brand is below the national average used in planning, or both.

The first factor, market brand potential, varies by product and is difficult to generalize. The second factor, local-market network audiences, must be generalized because planning is based upon next season's anticipated network performance. The prevalence of network "package" buys, which tend to deliver average audience levels, supports the use of average data.

The following tabulation, chosen especially for the Broadcasting/Cablecasting Yearbook, shows Arbitron Television's Areas of Dominant Influence (ADI) in terms of percent of the total number of U.S. TV households. Also given, in like percentage terms, are the network audiences in each ADI market during prime-time hours. It is this market audience figure, when compared to the market's share of population, that indicates whether the network commitment will perform above or below the national plan average in that market.

The figures are based on Arbitron Television's May 1983 Network Program Group Analysis.

Anatomy of Cable Regulation

An outline of federal cable television rules, including current regulations and developments

Cable television (also called CATV or community antenna television) was developed in the late 1940's in communities unable to receive TV signals because of terrain or distance from TV stations. Cable systems located their antennas in areas having good reception, picked up the signals, and then distributed them by cable to subscribers for a fee.

In 1950 cable systems were operating in only 70 communities in the United States; these systems served 14,000 subscribers, i.e., cable television homes. By the middle of 1983, according to A.C. Nielsen, approximately 7,600 cable systems served more than 32.9 million subscribers. The largest technically integrated system—Cox Cable in San Diego—serves more than 220,000 subscribers.

Cable television systems are operating in every state of the United States and in several other countries, including Austria, Canada, Belgium, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, Japan, Mexico, Sweden, and Switzerland. Within the U.S., Pennsylvania has the largest number of cable systems, and California has the largest subscriber population. Although the number of systems in large metropolitan areas is increasing, most cable systems are located in small communities.

Most systems are capable of offering 12 or more channels. Channel capacity in the industry has increased steadily over the years. Systems with up to 54 channels are now common. Most systems now being built in large metropolitan areas are planning to offer 100 or more channels on dual-cable systems.

The abundant channel capacity has made it possible for cable systems to provide many services in addition to the retransmission of broadcast signals. They include a myriad of cable networks that offer programing ranging from news to sports to uncut uninterrupted movies. Some like Home Box Office and Showtime are supported by monthly subscriber fees; others, like ESPN and Cable News Networks, are supported primarily by advertising dollars.

Some cable operators also originate local programing and provide "access" channels and lease channels for public and institutional uses. Electronic banking and shopping, utility-meter reading, home security and videotext are some of the services made feasible by the two-way transmission capabilities of the newest cable systems.

Initial Jurisdiction and Rules

The Federal Communications Commission first established rules in 1965 for systems which received signals by microwave. (Microwave stations have always been licensed by the FCC.) In March 1966, the commission established rules for all cable systems, whether or not served by microwave. See Second Reoort and Order in Docket 14895, 2 FCC 2d 725 (1966). This regulation required cable systems to carry all local TV stations (the must-carry rule); prohibited systems from duplication, on the same day, via signals originating in another city, a program broadcast by a local station; and prohibited them from bringing distant signals into the 100 major television markets without a hearing on the probable effect on local broadcasting. In all other markets, no restrictions were placed on the signals a cable system might carry, but procedures were adopted permitting threatened stations to challenge proposed importation of distant signals.

Challenged in the courts, the FCC cited its mandate under the Communications Act to regulate "interstate commerce by wire or radio." In June 1968, the Supreme Court affirmed the commission's jurisdiction over cable. The benchmark case, United States v. Southwestern Cable Co., 392 U.S. 157 (1968), arose from an interim commission decision in 1966 which limited the right of San Diego cable systems to carry the programing of Los Angeles stations. The court decided that "the commission has reasonably concluded that regulatory authority over CATV is imperative if it is to perform with appropriate effectiveness certain of its responsibilities." The court found that the FCC needed authority over cable systems to assure the preservation of local broadcast service and to effect an equitable distribution of broadcast services among the various regions of the country.

On December 13, 1968, the commission invited comments on a major revision and expansion of its cable rules (Docket 18397). The commission adopted "interim procedures" for use during the rulemaking proceeding. These procedures included suspension of distant signal hearings, deferral of processing of all petitions or applications seeking authorization of service inconsistent with the proposed signal carriage rules and grant of carriage requests consistent with the proposed rules.

A general outline of the proposed resolution of this proceedings was submitted to Congress on August 5, 1971, in a "Letter of Intent." While the rules adopted six months later generally adhered to those proposals, they were modified to reflect the consensus agreement on exclusivity and distant signal importation reached among broadcast, cable and television program production representatives in cooperation with the FCC and the White House Office of Telecommunications Policy.

The rules which the FCC adopted February 2, 1972, and which became effective March 31, 1972, were the most comprehensive compilation of regulations ever issued on cable television. See Cable Television Report and Order, 36 FCC 2d 143 (1972).

Current Rules and Proposed Changes

mThe rules adopted in 1972 required cable television operators to obtain a certificate of compliance from the FCC prior to operating a cable television system or adding a television broadcast signal. The rules applicable to cable operators fell into the following broad subject areas—franchising standards, signal carriage, network program nonduplication and syndicated program exclusivity, nonbroadcast or cablecasting services, cross-ownership, equal employment opportunity, and technical standards. Cable operators who originated programing were subject to equal time, Fairness Doctrine, sponsorship identification and other provisions similar to rules applicable to broadcasters. Cable operators were required to maintain certain records and to file annual reports with the FCC concerning general statistics, employment and finances. A cable operator's use of microwave has always required a license from the FCC.

Since 1972, the FCC has modified or eliminated many of the rules. Among the significant actions: the FCC deleted most of the franchise standards in 1977, substituted a signal registration process for the certificate-of-compliance process in 1978 and eliminated the distant-signal carriage restrictions and syndicated program exclusivity rules in 1980. In addition, court actions led to the deletion of the pay cable programing rules in 1977 and deletion of the cable television access rules in 1979.

For regulatory purposes, the rules distinguish between the terms "cable television system" and "system community unit." A cable television system is described as a "nonbroadcast facility consisting of a set of transmission paths and associated signal generation, reception, and control equipment, under common ownership and control, that distributes or is designed to distribute to subscribers the signals of one or more television broadcast stations . . . ." This definition does not include such facilities which serve fewer than 50 subscribers. Facilities which serve subscribers in one or more multiple unit dwellings under common ownership or management, usually master antenna television (MATV) systems, are also exempted under the FCC definition, regardless of whether they serve 50 or more subscribers.

The "headend" or "physical system" definition described above is applied primarily in rule provisions related to network program nonduplication protection exemptions, record maintenance, certain FCC reporting forms, cross-ownership, and technical standards.

The term "system community unit" means a cable

TV system, or portion of a cable system, operating within a separate and distinct community or municipal entity, including unincorporated areas and separate unincorporated areas within them. This definition of system is used in relation to registration, signal carriage, and network program nonduplication protection requirements.

As a precondition to commencing operation or adding any television broadcast signals to existing operations, a cable system operator must separately register each system community unit with the commission. If a cable television facility serves fewer than 50 subscribers but is part of a larger system which, taken as a whole, serves 50 or more subscribers, the smaller facility is considered a community unit and is required to register. Effective October 20, 1978, the commission eliminated the certificate of compliance application process for cable systems and instituted this new procedure. To register, a cable television operator must send the following information to the Secretary of the Commission:

(1) The legal name of the operator, Entity Identification or Social Security number, and whether the operator is an individual, private association, partnership or corporation; if the operator is a partnership, the legal name of the partner responsible for the communications with the commission;

(2) The assumed name (if any) used for doing business in the community;

(3)The mail address, including zip code, and the telephone number to which all communications are to be directed;

(4) The date the system provided service to 50 subscribers;

(5) The name of the community or area served and the county in which it is located;

(6) The television broadcast signals to be carried which previously have not been certified or registered; and

(7) For a cable system (or an employment unit) with five or more full-time employees, a statement of the proposed community unit's equal employment opportunity program, unless such program has previously been filed for the community unit or is not required to be filed based on an anticipated number of fewer than five full-time employes during January, February and March of the year following commencement of operation; an explanation must be submitted if no program statement is filed.

Registration statements must be signed by an authorized representative of the cable television company.

The cable television operator is not required to serve the registration statement on any party and may begin operation or add new signals immediately upon filing the registration statement. However, commencement of operation is entirely at the risk of the system operator; if violations of the rules are subsequently discovered, appropriate regulatory sanctions, including imposition of forfeitures and the issuance of cease and desist orders, may be employed. The commission does not systematically review the information to ascertain if the service proposed is in compliance with its rules. Filing a waiver request or including in a registration statement signals whose carriage is not permitted by the rules will not prevent the commission from imposing sanctions if carriage is commenced in violations of the rules, even if it subsequently were determined that waiver is appropriate.

Cable systems previously certified (and those which had certificates of compliance pending) are considered to be registered. No further filings, other than required annual reports, are necessary unless new signals are added.

Cable television systems serving fewer than 1,000 subscribers, are exempt from most of the commission's rules. Generally, only the following requirements apply to smaller cable systems:

(1) Comply with the resigtration requirements described above;

(2) Comply with requests from local television stations for carriage on the cable system;

(3) Comply with the commission's technical standards for cable television systems, including the frequency use requirements (except that annual proof of performance tests are not required);

(4) Correct and/or furnish information in response to the following forms sent to the cable operator annually by the commission: Form 325: "Annual Report of Cable Television System" (Schedules 1 and 2 only); Form 326: "Cable Television Annual Financial Report"; Form 395A: "Annual Employment Report" (including the annual report of complaints).

Acknowledging that federal licensing would be an unmanageable burden and that the industry was uniquely suited to "a deliberately structured dualism," the commission adopted a regulatory plan allowing local or state authorities to select a franchisee and to regulate in any areas that the FCC does not preempt. Typically, local governments have adopted laws and/or regulations on franchising, basic subscriber rates, theft of service, taxation, and pole attachment. The commission preempts local regulation of signal carriage, pay cable and technical quality. However, in the enforcement of technical standards, the FCC may authorize local arrangements in some cases.

In 1972 the commission adopted minimum standards for franchises issued by local governments. These standards related to the process of selecting a franchisee, franchise duration and fees, the establishment of construction timetables, and procedures for regulating rates and for handling subscriber complaints. In 1976 the commission deleted the franchise standard regarding local-rate regulation procedures and, effective November 15, 1977, amended the remaining franchise standards (Docket 21002). The standards, which had been mandatory, were maintained on a voluntary or guideline basis, with the exception of the franchise fee limit.

The commission's franchise standards retain the following nonmandatory recommendations or provisions that local governments might include in the franchise or as part of the franchising process:

(1) The franchising authority should approve a franchisee's qualifications only after a full public proceeding affording due process;

(2) Neither the initial franchise period nor the renewal period should exceed 15 years and any renewal should be granted only after a public proceeding affording due process;

(3) The franchise should accomplish significant construction within one year after registering with the Commission and make service available to a substantial portion of the franchise area each following year, as determined by the franchise authority;

(4) A franchise policy requiring less than complete wiring of the franchise area should be adopted only after a full public proceeding, preceded by specific notice of such policy; and

(5) The franchise should specify that the franchisee and franchisor have adopted local procedures for investigating and resolving complaints.

The standards also suggest that the franchise require the franchisee to maintain a local business office or agent for handling complaints and that it specify that procedures have been adopted for investigating and resolving complaints and that each new subscriber will be given notice of these procedures. The standards also recommend that the franchise designate, by title, the franchising authority office or official responsible for the continuing administration of the franchise and implementaion of complaint procedures.

The only mandatory franchise standard in the FCC's rules limits a franchise fee, the amount the system operator pays annually to the local franchising authority, to no more than 3 percent of the franchisee's gross revenues per year from all cable services in the community. The commission may approve a fee in the range of 3 to 5 percent if the franchisee shows that it will not interfere with federal regulatory goals and if the franchising authority justifies the entire fee as appropriate in light of the planned local regulatory program.

As a result of revisions in Docket 21002, franchising authorities may assess a fee on all cable revenues, rather than excluding those revenues derived from pay cable and other extra services. If the system community unit was franchised or began operating before March 31, 1972, however, a "grandfathered" fee may be collected until either 15 years from the initial grant of the franchise or the end of the current franchise period, which ever occurs first.

Most systems charge a monthly fee for "basic" cable television service and separate fees for each of the subscription-supported (pay) cable networks. The FCC has preempted local regulation of pay television, but local government may (and most do) regulate basic fees.

According to the most recent FCC annual financial data, the average monthly subscriber rate for 1981 was $7.94. Among the states, the average low rate was $6.50 in Vermont and the average high rate was $20.01 in Alaska. The average monthly rate for pay service was $9.56, with a range of $6 per month in the Virgin Islands to $12.93 per month in Alaska. The average installation fee was $18.32, with a range of $11.45 in Rhode Island as a low to $40 in the Virgin Islands as the high.

The 1972 carriage rules set up standards of television signal carriage which vary with market size. The determining factor is whether a community is located wholly or partially within a 35-mile radius—called the specified zone—of a commercial TV station licensed to a major or smaller television market, as defined in the commission's cable television rules.

Certain television broadcast signals are required to be carried by cable systems, if the stations request it. Systems serving communities in major or smaller television markets must carry, on request, signals from the following broadcast sources: all television stations licensed to communities within 35 miles of the cable system community; noncommercial educational television stations within whose Grade B contour the system community is located; commercial TV translator stations with 100 watts or higher power serving the community of the system and noncommercial translators with 5 watts or higher power serving the community; stations whose signals are significantly viewed in the community. The significant viewing standard is: for network stations, a minimum 3 percent share of viewing hours and 25 percent net weekly circulation; for independent stations, a minimum of 2 percent share and 5 percent net weekly circulation. A list of significantly viewed signals on a county-wide basis, as determined by a survey taken in 1970 and 1971, is contained in Appendix B of the Memorandum Opinion and Order on Reconsideration of the Cable Television Report and Order, FCC 72-530, 36 FCC 2d 326 (1972); all Grade B signals from other small markets (applies to systems serving communities in smaller markets only). Where a cable system community is located entirely or partially within both a major and smaller television market, the carriage provisions for the major market apply.

In communities located outside of all markets, cable systems must carry signals from the following sources: all stations within whose Grade B signal contour the system community is located; commercial translator stations with 100 watts or higher power and noncommercial translators with 5 watts or higher power serving the community; stations whose signals are significantly viewed in the community; all educational stations licensed to communities within 35 miles of the system community.

The cable TV rules adopted in 1972 contained restrictions on the importation of distant signals by cable systems, with the exemption of those serving fewer than 1,000 subscribers. In general, the rules permitted carriage of an affiliate of each broadcast television network and from one to three independent stations, depending on the size of the market in which a system was located. Systems located outside of all television markets were not restricted as to a certain number or type of distant signal.

The programs of television broadcast signals must be carried in full, without alteration or deletion of their content. In cases where all parties agree, however, commercial inserts or changes may be permitted if the commission grants a waiver of its rules.

All educational stations within 35 miles of a cable system community located outside of all television markets and all educational stations that place a Grade B signal contour over the community of a system in a major or smaller market must be carried by the cable system. Also cable systems serving communities in states where noncommercial educational stations are run by a state agency may carry any such stations. Any additional educational stations may be carried if there are no convincing objections.

The commission places no restrictions on either the carriage of radio stations or cable system origination of radio programing.

Cable television community units serving 1,000 or more subscribers may not carry local sports events broadcast by distant television stations when the events are not broadcast on local television stations. The purpose of this rule is to maintain the integrity of local television sports blackouts. The holder of broadcast rights is responsible for notification of programing deletions at least no later than Monday preceding the calendar week during which deletions are desired. Programing from any other television station may be substituted for the deleted program.

The signal carriage rules do not require a cable operator to carry the subscription, or scrambled programing portion of a subscription television station (STV). If the station qualified for mandatory carriage, however, the cable operator would be obliged to carry, on request, the unscrambled portion of the signal.

In June 1977 the commission began an inquiry into the economic relationship between television broadcasting and cable television (Docket 21284). In April 1979, on the basis of its economic inquiry Report which concluded that elimination of the distant signal carriage restrictions would benefit consumers without harming the ability of broadcast stations to meet their public interest responsibilities, the commission issued a notice of proposed rulemaking to delete these rules. In July 1980 the commission adopted the recommendations in Report and Order in Dockets 21284 and 20988, 79 FCC 2d 652 (1980). The rule changes became effective July 7, 1981, following affirmation of the commission's decision by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in Malrite T.V. of New York, Inc. et al. v. FCC and USA, 652 F. 2d 1140 (2nd Cir. 1981), cert denied, 50 U.S.L W. 3547 (1982).

Nonduplication protection is afforded a local station program when a cable system does not duplicate the same program carried simultaneously on a distant station of the same network. The rationale for the nonduplication rules is that duplication of the local station's programing through carriage of distant signals could fractionalize the audience, thereby economically injuring local broadcasters and the service they provide to the public.

All systems serving at least 1,000 subscribers per headend are required to comply with the following general provisions:

Dual Channel Carriage—whenever a local station's programing is protected, a cable system may carry the local station on the channel reserved for the programing of the more distant duplicating signal. This provision averts the need for a "blacked out" channel that would otherwise result.

Zones of Protection—cable system community units located within fixed mileage zones (35 miles for stations licensed to top-100, or major television markets and 55 miles for those licensed to smaller markets) of communities to which TV stations are licensed must provide nonduplication protection to those stations.

Translator Stations—these stations located within the predicted Grade B contour of their parent station are entitled to nonduplication protection against the duplicating network programing of stations more than 55 miles away from the cable community. In addition, translators licensed to a cable community need not be blacked out to protect other stations.

Notification—television stations seeking nonduplication protection must submit their requests to cable systems at least six days before the broadcast of the program to be protected and are required to notify the system of last-minute schedule changes. The First Report and Order in Docket 19995 includes a sample notification form.

Program Overruns—the rules allow a one-your "grace period" during which nonduplication protection need not be provided.

Same-Day Protection—stations in the Mountain Time Zone are entitled only to simultaneous rather than same-day nonduplication protection. However, a station may be granted more protection by the commission upon a showing of need.

Significantly Viewed Signals—cable systems are not required to delete the programing of any station that is significantly viewed in the cable community. The court's decision in Spartan Radiocasting Co. et al. v. FCC and USA, 619 F. 2d 314 (4th Cir. 1980), affirmed the commission's 1978 rule change (Docket 19995), which then became effective May 29, 1980.

The syndicated program exclusivity rules required that a cable system serving a community in the first 50 major markets, upon a notification from the copyright holder, cease carrying syndicated programs from a distant signal during a preclearance period of one year from the date that they were sold for the first time as syndicated programs in the United States. And a cable system in any major market was not permitted to carry a syndicated program to which a commercial TV station, licensed to a designated community in the market, had exclusive right. A station was required to request such protection by appropriate notice. There were several exceptions to this prohibition for cable systems in the second 50 major markets. Also, systems serving fewer than 1,000 subscribers per headend were exempt from these requirements. When a program was deleted under the syndicated program exclusivity rules, a cable system could substitute programing, not otherwise subject to deletion, from any other television station.

In November 1976, the commission began an inquiry (Docket 20988) to reevaluate the syndicated exclusivity rules by examining the following options: deletion of the rules; expansion of their applicability to smaller markets; revision of criteria; or retention of the present rules. In April 1979, the commission adopted a Report on the syndicated exclusivity rules and issued a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking in Dockets 20988 and 21284 in which it proposed to delete the rules. On July 22, 1980, the commission decided to delete the syndicated program exclusivity rules in their entirety. These rule changes became effective on July 7, 1981, following affirmation of the commission's decision by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in Malrite T.V. of New York, Inc. et al. v. FCC and USA, 652 F. 2d 1140 (2nd Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 50 U.S.L.W. 3547 (1982).

A nonbroadcast channel is any channel which is not transmitting the signal of a licensed broadcast station. Two types of cablecasting channels—access and origination—fall into this category. Access channels are usually distinguished from origination channels, because cable operators program the latter and usually other individuals or groups the former. This distinction may be narrow or broad however, depending upon such factors as the cable system's resources and the terms of the local franchise agreement.

The commission's rules do not require cable operators to originate programing nor to provide access channels. Operators who originate programing, however, are required to comply with the FCC's rules on cablecasts by candidates for public office, the Fairness Doctrine, lotteries, and sponsorship identification.

The rules also prohibit a cable operator from using origination channels to cablecast obscene or indecent material. The restriction, however, applies only to programing subject to the exclusive control of the cable operator. Although programing of cable networks is "originated," cable operators usually cannot easily exert editorial control over its content. Furthermore, the preemption of regulation of pay cable fees prevents the imposition of local sanctions on such channels. On the other hand, requirements regarding access channels are often the subject of franchise agreements and local regulation. No federal rules relate to access channels.

Both access and origination channels typically provide community-oriented programing, such as local news, public announcements, and governmental meetings. Originated programing may also include many types of specialized program packages such as movies, sports, national news and public affairs, feature entertainment, children's shows, and programing for specific ethnic groups. Program distributors or pay cable companies supply nonbroadcast programing to cable operators for this purpose. At least 40 such program services for origination channels in addition to signals of several independent television stations are available now via satellite transmission.

Cable operators frequently identify access and origination channels by single or double letters or by some other method to avoid confusion with broadcast stations' call letters. In a policy statement issued October 8, 1976, on problems that could arise from the method or lack of identification of cablecast channels, the FCC recommended that cable operators not use broadcast call letters for such purpose.

The commission first adopted access rules in 1972, requiring systems in the top-100 television markets to provide four dedicated channels for access (one each for public, educational, governmental, and leased access). In 1969 the commission had adopted a requirement that cable systems also originate programing but stayed this rule in 1971. In 1974 the commission deleted the origination requirement, and in 1976 it revised the access rules. The revised rules, required that all systems with 3,500 or more subscribers, regardless of market, provide up to four access channels only if they had sufficient activated channel capability to do so and if there were demand for full-time use of the channels. Otherwise, they were required to provide at least one composite, or combined access, channel. Provisions regarding equipment availability, charges for channel use, and local operating rules were also contained in the former FCC rules.

As a result of a U.S. Supreme Court decision on April 2, 1979, the FCC no longer requires any cable television operator to provide channels or equipment for public, educational, governmental or leased access use nor to provide a certain channel capacity. In its decision in FCC v. Midwest Video Corp., 440 U.S. 689 (1979), the Court held that the access requirements exceeded the FCC's jurisdiction because they imposed common-carrier obligations on cable operators.

Prior to the U.S. Supreme Court decision, the Commission required systems having 3,500 or more sub-

A short course in cable, 1984

There are 5,800 operating cable systems in the U.S., serving some 15,665 communities. Another 1,939 franchises are approved but not built. Pennsylvania has the most systems (351) and California the most subscribers (2.6 million). Operating systems currently reach about 34.1 million subscribers, perhaps over 95 million people—40% of the nation's TV households. The largest (Cox Cable in San Diego) has about 225,00 subscribers. Some have fewer than 100. Tele-Communications Inc. is the largest multiple system operator (MSO), with more than 2,200,000 subscribers. Industry revenues last year totaled approximately $2.8 billion. Most systems offer 12 channels. Systems constructed after March 1972 must have a minimum 20-channel capacity. The average monthly fee (basic service) is $7.94. Costs of laying cable range from $10,000 per mile in rural areas to $20,000 in urban areas and up to $100,000 where underground cable is required. An estimated 3,250 systems originate programing in their own studios, the average for 23 hours weekly. Equipment costs are as low as $30,000 for a small black and white operation and $200,000 for a color studio. Over 700 systems (14% of all systems) accept advertising on their local origination channels (excluding automated channels), with rates from $2 to $400 per 30-second spot. Most cable systems derive less than 5% of their gross revenues from advertising. Pay cable is on approximately 4,800 systems and reaches 15 million subscribers in 50 states. Most pay cable operators are reporting close to 44% penetration of their subscriber count. Home Box Office Inc. initiated the first national satellite interconnected pay network Sept. 30, 1975, using transponder time leased on the Satcom satellite. Aside from contracting for packaged pay programs, like HBO, cable operators can lease a channel to a pay program operator or secure their own programing directly from a supplier. Over 38% of all cable systems have ties with broadcast interests, almost 21% with program producers and approximately 33% with newspapers. Many systems have multiple cross-ownership ties.

scribers to provide a minimum potential capacity of 20 channels and to provide the technical capability for nonvoice return, or two-way communications. Systems in operation as of March 31, 1972, with less than 20-channel capacity and at least 3,500 subscribers were required to reconstruct by June 21, 1986, to comply with the channel capacity requirements. These rules were set aside by the Court's decision.

As a result of another court decision, in NARUC v. FCC, 533 F. 2d 601 (D.C. Cir. 1976), the FCC no longer regulates intrastate two-way, point-to-point nonvideo cable transmissions. State and local authorities, therefore, may regulate cable transmissions of data and other nonvideo programing.

Cable systems frequently offer pay cable services, on a per-program or per-channel basis, to supplement the basic retransmission service. Included are feature films, sports events of regional or national interest, and entertainment programs specifically produced for the cable audience.

Two recent Federal Circuit Court decisions involved the FCC's jurisdiction to regulate pay cable. In Home Box Office Inc. v. FCC, 567 F. 2d 9, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 829 (D.C. Cir. 1977), the court overturned the FCC's pay cable program content rules because of failure to demonstrate a genuine problem which required regulation. The FCC does not now regulate pay cable program content.

In Brookhaven Cable TV Inc. v. Kelly, 573 F. 2d 765 (2d Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 99 S. Ct. 1991 (1979), the court affirmed a lower court finding that FCC preemption of pay cable rates precluded the New York State Commission on Cable Television from regulating such rates. The court found that FCC preemption in this area was clearly asserted and within its jurisdiction.

All operators of cable systems serving 1,000 or more subscribers must have a current copy of the commission's cable television rules. In addition, the operators must maintain locally for public inspection a copy of the franchise, application(s) to the FCC including any petitions for special relief or show cause, FCC annual reports and related documents, and any application for transfer of control of a cable television relay station that may serve the system.

Furthermore, all operators must maintain in the public inspection file certain records for specific periods of time. Records required on equal employment opportunity and annual performance tests must be retained for five years. Records of origination cablecasts by candidates for public office and lists identifying sponsors of originated programing must be maintained for two years. Records required on network program nonduplication private agreements must be maintained for the run of the contract. These documents must be maintained on file either at the system's local office or another accessible place in the community. Operators of systems serving fewer than 1,000 subscribers are not required to provide nonduplication protection or to conduct performance tests.

All systems of all sizes must retain for three years all records of subscribers served during the last month of each quarter of operation. This record does not have to be included in the public inspection file, but it must be made available upon request by an authorized commission representative.

Nondiscrimination rules were adopted shortly following the 1972 Report and Order and have remained largely unchanged, although in 1978 the commission restructured the regulations to improve their readability and adopted some minor revisions (Docket 20829). All operators of cable systems and cable relay stations are required to afford equal opportunity in employment to all qualified persons and are prohibited from discrimination in employment because of race, color, religion, national origin, or sex.

The rules require all cable operators and CARS licensees to establish and maintain programs designed to assure equal opportunity for females, Blacks, Hispanics, American Indians or Alaskan Natives, and Asians or Pacific Islanders in recruitment, selection, training, placement, promotion, pay, working conditions, demotion, layoff, and termination.

In addition, if systems have five or more fulltime employees, they must keep on file with the commission and up-to-date statement of their equal opportunity program and file any changes to existing programs on or before May 31 of each year.

The commission sends computer printed forms on the following subjects and asks for verification of their accuracy: (1) Schedules 1 and 2 of Form 325 (annual report of cable systems); (2) Form 326 (annual financial report), Schedule 1 of which is preprinted; and (3) Form 395A (annual employment report).

Whenever a change occurs in a system's mail address, operator legal name, or operational status, e.g., it obtains 50 or 1,000 subscribers, the operator must notify the commission of the change within 30 days.

The commission prohibits cable system ownership by telephone companies within their local exchange areas, by television stations within the same local service area (Grade B contour) and by national television networks anywhere in the country.

The ban on telephone company ownership was designed to deter anti-competitive and discriminatory practices that evolved from the local telephone company's monopoly position in the community and its ownership of utility poles, which usually carry the distribution cables. This rules does not prevent telephone companies from owning cable systems outside their local exchange area or from providing cable facilities (channel distribution service) on a lease or tariff basis for use by an unaffiliated system. In January 1980 the commission instituted a policy of reviewing waiver requests from telephone companies proposing to provide cable television service in areas with a density of fewer than 30 homes per mile (CC Docket 78-219). The purpose of the policy is to encourage the development of cable service in rural areas. More recently the commission supplemented this policy by adopting a waiver standard which exempted rural areas (i.e., places of less than 2,500 inhabitants) from the telephone-cable cross-ownership restrictions (CC Docket 80-767; effective December 4, 1981).

The FCC may impose forfeitures by issuing either a notice affording an opportunity for hearing or a notice of apparent liability to individuals holding a commission certificate, license, or other authorization. Prior to the commision's issuing either of such notices to individuals not holding, nor required to hold, an FCC authorization, the following preconditions are recessary: (1) the commission must issue a citation of violation, (2) the commission must provide the opportunity for an interview, and (3) the individual subsequently must engage in the violative conduct described in the citation. The maximum fine imposed on cable system operators for each separate offense is $2,000, the total fine not to exceed $20,000 for each notice of liability or hearing. Each day of a continuing violation is considered a separate offense. In the case of cable television systems, the commission must issue any such notice within one year of the offense.

In 1980 the commission adopted procedural rules to implement the forfeiture law and has delegated certain forfeiture authority to the Cable Television Bureau.

The Act for General Revision of the Copyright Law (Public Law 94-533, Title 17 U.S.C.), effective January 1, 1978, established for the first time an obligation for cable operators to pay copyright fees for the retransmission of broadcast signals. Regulations implementing the law may be obtained from the Copyright Office which administers the law. The Office is part of the Library of Congress.

According to the provision of the law, cable operators must pay a copyright royalty fee for which they receive a compulsory license to retransmit radio and television broadcast signals. The fee for each cable system is based on the system's gross revenues from the carriage of broadcast signals and the number of "distant signal equivalents," a term identifying non-network programing from distant television staions carried by the system.

Every six months, according to the law, cable operators must file a statement of accounts—information about system revenues and signal carriage—and pay royalties fees. The fees are based on a percentage of gross basic revenues. A cable system must pay .799 percent of revenues for the first distant-signal; .503 percent for the second, third and fourth distant-signals, and .237 percent for the fifth and each additional distant-signal. There are exceptions. Systems are required to pay 3.75 percent for each signal added after the FCC's distant-signal and syndicated exclusivity rules were lifted. (The 3.75 percent fee has been challenged by cable operators in federal court and will not go into effect until affirmed by the court.) In addition, systems whose total gross revenues are less than $160,000 for the six-month accounting period pay reduced fees; systems grossing less than $41,500 every six months pay a modest flat fee.

The law also established a Copyright Royalty Tribunal, composed of five commissioners, to distribute the royalty fees and resolve disputes among copyright owners and to review the fee schedule in 1980 and every five years subsequently. The Copyright Tribunal also is responsible for revising the rates whenever the FCC amends its carriage rules in a manner that would allow carriage of additional programing from distant stations. Any revision of rates should reflect changes impacting on the copyright owners' property value. After the FCC dropped the distant-signal and syndicated-exclusivity rules, for instance, the CRT hiked the fees across the board and imposed the 3.75 percent charge.

The questions of whether copyright fees may be added onto subscriber rates is entirely within the purview of local regulatory authorities.

The U.S. Congress has devoted considerable attention to communications matters in recent years and, in particular, cable television policies, but has yet to pass any legislation.

In January 1976, the staff of the Subcommittee on Communications of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee of the House of Representatives prepared a report on cable television entitled Cable Television: Promise Versus Regulatory Performance. The Subcommittee subsequently conducted hearings on cable television which eventually led to the decision of several Subcommittee members to undertake a comprehensive review of communications policies in a complete "rewrite" of the Communications Act of 1934. As a result, H.R. 13015, commonly referred to as the "Communications Act rewrite," was introduced in the 95th Congress. A second rewrite bill, H.R. 3333 was introduced in the 96th Congress in March 1979. After holding hearings, the Subcommittee shelved most of the broadcast and cable provisions and redrafted only the common carrier portions. The resulting legislation H.R. 6121, was introduced in December 1979, amended, and voted out of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (Oct. 8, 1980) and the Judiciary Committee (Aug. 25, 1980).

In the 97th Congress, the renamed Subcommittee on Telecommunications, Consumer Protection and Finance, held hearings in May 1981 on the status of competition and deregulation in the telecommunications industry, in July on cable franchising, and in September on diversity of information sources. Following release of a report in November 1981 entitled Telecommunications in Transition: The Status of Competition in the Telecommunications Industry, H.R. 5158 (Telecommunications Act of 1981) was introduced in December 1981. The bill relates primarily to common carrier services, with the exception of extending the existing pole attachment law and codifying the recent FCC decision exempting rural areas from the telephone-cable cross-ownership restrictions.

The FCC's rule prohibiting certain types of television-cable cross-ownerships takes into account the growing role of cable systems as program originators and is designed to ensure vigorous competition among the media and to obtain for the public the greatest possible diversity of control over local mass communications media. In its proceeding in Docket 20423, in 1975 the commission amended its rule to require divestiture only in situations it identified as egregious. In June 1980, in a further notice of rulemaking in the same proceeding, the commission has proposed to require divestiture of all cross-ownerships.

As part of its continuing concern with patterns of media ownership, the commission investigated whether cable system ownership by radio stations and local daily newspapers should be prohibited. An additional question was whether there should be an upper limit on the number of cable systems owned by a single entity nationally or on a regional basis. The commission concluded that no rules limiting cable-radio or cable-newspaper cross-ownership were required at present, but it continues to study these issues (Docket 18891).

In October 1980 the commission requested a staff study of the broad range of ownership issues. The economic study, conducted by the commission's Office of Plans and Policy and released for comment in November 1981, concluded that cable television is a highly flexible, high capacity technology capable of providing a wide range of services and that its market is local and workably competitive. It endorsed a policy of free entry into cable and concluded that consumer preference and entrepreneurial incentives could best determine an industry structure which meets consumer needs. The study recommended deleting all of the broadcast-cable and network-cable cross-ownership rules and retaining the current general ban on telephone-cable cross-ownership. It also recommended against imposing multiple ownership limitations or a separations policy (i.e., separation of ownership and operation of facilities from control of transmission or program content).

To assure the delivery of satisfactory television signals to cable subscribers, the commission requires cable operators to meet certain technical performance requirements. These requirements, however, do not apply to nonbroadcast services (such as access channels), cable TV receivers, "ghosting" and cable carriage of AM and FM programing. In general, the rules require every cable operator to conduct annual performance tests and to use these results to determine whether the system is performing satisfactorily. Systems serving fewer than 1,000 subscribers are subject to the technical standards but are not required to take annual measurements. It should be noted, however, that any system, regardless of its number of subscribers, which operates in the frequency bands 108-136 and 225-400 mhz must comply with the signal leakage standards of the rules, including annual performance measurements.

The FCC preempts state or local regulation of technical performance requirements to prevent the establishment of nonuniform requirements that might hinder system interconnectability and impede the development and marketing of new cable services and equipment. However, the commission welcomes local assistance in the resolution of subscriber complaints involving technical standards. Waivers may be granted in the area of additional standards only upon a showing of local capability to enforce them.

As a result of the final report of the Cable Technical Advisory Committee (CTAC), the commission modified its technical standards (Docket 20765) to allow systems to make technical performance measurements based on headends rather than communities.

In the same proceeding, the FCC relaxed several standards for signal levels, clarified frequency standards for converters, and relaxed the frequency tolerance for cable carriage of translator signals.

Major current technical standards questions are (1) standards for signal leakage, (2) frequency channelling plans, and (3) standards for cable compatible receivers. Research in progress on the nature of signal leakage must precede frequency channelling decision, which in turn must precede standardization of cable compatible receivers. The problem of signal leakage is being addressed in Docket 21006. A Final Report of the Advisory Committee on Cable Signal Leakage, released January 24, 1980, is available through the National Technical Information Service (703/487-4650), publication number PB80-119605. This study resulted in a further rulemaking in Docket 21006 proposing new rules to control interference to aeronautical radio services due to signal leakage from cable television systems using aeronautical radio frequencies.

Any cable system, regardless of its size, which intends to use a frequency in the band 108-136 mhz or 225-400 mhz above certain power levels, must first notify the commission of its intention and await authorization before using the proposed frequencies which might interfere with the air navigation and communications functions of local aeronautical radio services. The standards used to determine the permissibility of proposed frequency usage are based on geographical proximity to nearby aeronautical radio stations and the degree of separation between the proposed cable frequencies and those in use by the aeronautical stations.

Cable systems, in addition to providing subscribers with off-the-air signals, also obtain signals, sometimes from hundreds of miles away, through microwave relay stations. Cable TV operators may purchase microwave relay service from companies providing such common carrier services, or they may operate their own relay stations licensed by the FCC as cable television relay service (CARS) stations.

The CARS rules also authorize licensing of mobile remote pickup stations for the transmission of programing from the scenes of events outside a studio back to the cable studio or headend. In addition, they provide for the licensing of studio-to-headend link (SHL) stations.

The CARS rules provide that cable system owners or cooperative enterprises are eligible to be CARS licensees. The service is designed to enable a cable system operator to serve his sytem. However, the rules add that a CARS licensee also may serve nonaffiliated cable systems based on a cost-sharing, nonprofit arrangement. These arrangements permit the delivery of cable programing where the economies might otherwise prevent a small system from using microwave transmission.

The commission on an ad hoc basis has permitted noncable operators, primarily educational institutions, to own and operate CARS stations. It also has permitted CARS licensees to serve translators (Docket 20539).

The advent of satellite-earth station transmission capability adds another dimension to microwave communications. The interface between a receive-only earth station and a CARS network now offers greater flexibility in the distribution of programing to cable systems and a relatively inexpensive means of providing a long-haul transmission capability.

Other Regulatory Matters

Most systems distribute TV signals through coaxial cable strung on existing poles owned by telephone or electric utility companies. Cable operators also may use their own poles, place their cable underground, or use transmission facilities or rights-of-way owned or controlled by a utility. Some may use combinations of these arrangements.

Sometimes conflicts arise between cable television systems and utility companies over pole attachment issues, particularly the rates for use of utility facilties. The Communications Act Amendments of 1978 (P.L. 95-234, approved February 21, 1978) require the FCC to regulate the rates, terms, and conditions for cable TV pole attachments to insure they are just and reasonable in the absence of state regulation. The law requires states to certify to the commission that it regulates the rates, terms, and conditions for pole attachments and that it has the authority to consider and does consider the interests of cable TV subscribers and utility consumers. Alaska, California, Connecticut, Hawaii, Illinois, Kentucky, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Puerto Rico, Tennesee, Utah, Vermont, Washington, and Wisconsin have certified to the commission that pole attachment regulation is within their jurisdiction (Public Notice, February 2, 1982).

In the Communications Act Amendments of 1978 the Congress also granted the commission authority to impose monetary forfeitures on cable television systems or CARS licensees found to be in violation of the FCC rules, terms or conditions of a certificate or license, any commission order, or any provision of the Communications Act.

The Senate Communications Subcommittee also held hearings on cable television (June 1977), and several senators introduced specific legislative amendments S. 611 and 622 (March 2, 1979). Following hearings, these amendments were incorporated into a new comprehensive set of amendments presented to Congress in June 1980 as S. 2827.

This legislation addressed the FCC's regulatory authority on cable television ownership, signal carriage, rates, franchise fees and programing. No hearings were held on S. 2827. On April 17, 1981, several senators introduced S. 898, the Telecommunications Competition and Deregulation Act of 1981, on which hearings were held in June. Although amendments containing cable television provisions were included in the bill as reported out of committee, the majority of these amendments were defeated when the full legislation passed the Senate in October. The remaining cable TV related provisions, similar to H.R. 5158, also codify the new rules on telephone company ownership of cable systems in rural areas and preclude the dominant telephone carrier from providing cable television service. A comprehensive cable television bill, S. 2172 (Cable Telecommunications Act of 1982, introduced March 4), proposed to amend the Communications Act of 1934. Due primarily to opposition from municipalities which feared the loss of their regulatory power over cable, S. 2172 died at the close of the 97th Congress. During the 98th Congress, in June 1983, a revised cable bill, S. 66, based on a compromise between cities and cable interests, was passed by the Senate. A companion House bill (H.R. 4103) was subsequently introduced.

A wide variety of laws and regulations for cable television exist at the state level. Eleven states regulate cable television on a comprehensive basis through a state agency. In Massachusetts, Minnesota, and New York, these agencies are special commissions established for the sole purpose of cable television regulation. In Alaska, Connecticut, Delaware, New Jersey, Rhode Island, and Vermont, the agencies are state public utility commissions. In Hawaii, regulation of cable television is the responsibility of the Department of Regulatory Agencies. In addition, at least 30 other states have one or more laws specifically applicable to cable television, dealing most commonly with such subjects as franchising, theft of service, pole attachment, rate regulation and taxation.

The commission encourages meaningful input from the public. The FCC's rules provide for public participation in all phases of its regulatory proceedings. Persons who wish to participate but are unfamiliar with the procedures may contact the Office of Public Affairs, Consumer Assistance and Small Business Division, Room 202, FCC, 1919 M Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20554. All filing should be mailed or delivered to the Secretary, FCC, 1919 M Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20554.

A cable system operator, broadcaster, or any other person may seek special relief or a waiver of any rule at any time. As a result, the commission may waive an existing rule, or impose different requirements. Requests for declaratory orders, seeking FCC interpretation to clarify a disputed question about the rules, may be treated as a petition for special relief or rulemaking.

A petitioner may submit the request by letter, accompanied by certification that all parties who may be directly affected by any commission action (i.e., interested parties) have been given a copy of the request. In addition to stating the relief requested, the petition should contain the facts demonstrating the need for relief and show how granting the request would serve the public interest. An original and two copies of the petition must be filed with the Secretary of the Commission.

The Complaints and Information Branch of the Compliance Division of the FCC's Cable Television Bureau functions to resolve problems involving cable systems. Its services include (1) attempting to clear up misunderstandings between subscribers or local governments and cable systems on commission rules; (2) dealing with complaints about a system's service; and (3) helping local governments to structure complaint procedures.

Under the dual jurisdictional approach exercised by the commission and by local authorities over cable television, several important areas of consumer concern are administered by localities rather than by the FCC. These include subscriber rates and installation fees, inaccurate bills and questionable billing practices, damage to property, illegal taps, extension of cable service to individual homes and businesses, repairs, improper wiring, and false or misleading advertising concerning the cable system's capabilities. Complainants are urged to make their complaints by letter, directed to local officials reponsible for regulation of their cable system.

Every cable operator serving 1,000 or more subscribers is required by the FCC to have an up-to-date copy of the Cable Television Rules and Regulations (47 CFR Part 76) and to keep track of commission actions that might alter them. These rules are available in loose leaf form on a subscriiption basis through the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Changes in the rules are forwarded to subscribers within a few months after their adoption by the Commission, without additional charges. To order, request Volume XI of the FCC Rules and Regulations, August 1976 edition.

Cable TV Systems in the United States and Canada

Key to the Listings

Listed in this directory are all the cable television systems and franchise holders in the United States and Canada. Each is listed under the principal community of service, by state or province.

Shown to the right is a sample listing, with explanation of information keyed to the boldface numbers. This information is as of May 1983.

(1) Name of system, local address, zip code and telephone.
(2) Personnel and attorney.
(3) Area served: Springfield is the principal community; the system also serves nearby Paris borough and Twillham township.
(4) County in which the service area is located.
(5) Type of TV market. According to FCC rules a CATV system is within a TV market if any part of the system falls within 35 miles of a commercial TV city-of-license. There are three locational categories: Top-100 markets; "smaller TV markets," i.e., any community with a commercial TV station not in the top 100; and, third, locations outside all TV markets. Systems outside a market may still be required to offer nonduplication protection if they fall within 55 miles of a city-of-license.
(6) Statistical data: total number of subscribers; homes passed by the system; total homes in the communities served (where this figure is not available, population is given); date the system began; length of plant; cost to the subscriber for installation and monthly service; and fee the community levies on the cable company (usually a percentage of gross revenue). In states with an across-the-board fee, the fee appears under the state heading.
(7) Summary of system, showing number of channels used for each service. Total capacity is that of the distribution system. Pan-State has 27 channels. Twelve are used for TV carriage; one for pay cable (which carries high-quality programing at an additional charge); two for basic cable services, such as CNN or ESPN; two for automated services, such as weather and news data; four for public access programing; three for any other programing originated by the cable system. The system also supplies allband FM service. (If the system carries selected radio, rather than allband, the number of AM and FM stations is shown.

SAMPLE LISTING

Springfield. (1) Pan-State Cable Inc., Box 100 99999. (800) 555-1000. (2) Chester Arthur, mgr; A.G. Bell, chief tech. Atty: Fillmore & Taylor, Washington.
(3) Serves Springfield, Paris bor, Twillham twp. (4) Washington county.
(5) Smaller TV market.
(6) Subscribers: 3,000; homes passed: 4,000; total homes in franchised area: 15,000. Started 12/68. Length 25 mi. Charges: instal $8; $4.50/mo. Franchise fee 3%.
(7) Channel usage: total ch capacity 27; TV chs 12; pay cable 1; basic cable 2; automated 2; access 4; other origination programing 1. Allband FM.
(8) ■ Pay cable: ch 4 (HBO; 350 subscribers; $9/mo.).
(9) Origination—automated: 2 chs (news, time, weather); (10) access: 4 chs (1 leased); (11) other: one ch (local origination).
(12) Basic cable: 2 chs (CNN, ESPN).
(13) Adv accepted; annual volume $35,000.
(14) Other services: Two-way capability, burglar alarm.
(15) Ownership: Lunar Cable Co. 60% (see MSO); James Buchanon, pres, 15%; G. Marconi, exec VP, 25% (see Bcstrs in Cable TV).

(8) Pay cable. Where a cable system provides pay cable service, a solid square (■) highlights the pertinent information: the channel on which pay programing is carried, the program supplier, total pay subscribers and monthly subscriber cost above that charged for regular cable service. Pay cable program suppliers are: Home Box Office, Showtime, The Movie Channel, Cinemax, Spotlight, The Playboy Channel, HTN Plus, The Disney Channel, Galavision and Bravo.
(9) Automated origination. Two channels are used by system to carry automated news, weather and time.
(10) Access channels. Channels are made available for programing by persons other than the cable operator. Channels are assigned to the general public, educational institutions and local government; Channels may also be leased by private parties. (See directory on page D-317 for newspapers leasing cable channels for electronic publishing.)
(11) Other origination. The sample listing shows that this system has one other origination channel. It is a locally originated channel. This type of origination often carries advertising.
(12) Basic cable. The sample listing shows that this system has two basic cable channels. The two channels carry satellite transmitted programing. Basic cable services carry a minimal charge paid by the cable system operator or no charge programing. These services often carry advertising.

Services are: Alpha Repertory Television Service (ARTS), Appalachian Community Service Network (ACSN), Black Entertainment Television (BET), Cable Health Network (Cable Health Net), Cable News Network (CNN), Cable News Network Headline News (CNN Headline News), Christian Broadcasting Network (CBN), C-SPAN, Daytime, Electronic Program Guide (EPG), Entertainment and Sports Programming Network (ESPN), Eternal Word Television Network (Eternal Word), Financial News Network (Fin News), MSN The Information Channel (MSN Info), Music Television (MTV), The Nashville Network (Nashville), National Christian Network (Nat Christian), National Jewish Television (Nat Jewish), Nickelodeon, PTL Television Network (PTL), Satellite Program Network (SPN), SIN National Spanish Television Network (SIN), Trinity Broadcasting Network (Trinity), USA Cable Network (USA), The Weather Channel (Weather Channel), WFMT(FM) Chicago (WFMT), WGN-TV Chicago (WGN), WOR-TV New York (WOR), WTBS(TV) Atlanta (WTBS). [Note: Satellite News Channels is no longer in business.]

(13) System accepts advertising (on local origination or automated channels), with yearly revenue shown.
(14) Other services offered by the system. "Two-way capability" indicates the distribution system is equipped to handle subscriber-to-headend signals. Special radio services (distant imported signals, shortwave, etc.) are also shown.

(15) Ownership. If a multiple system operator (MSO) owns the system in part or in whole, reference is made to the MSO directory which is on page D-296 of this section, listed the particulars for persons and companies with an interest in three or more cable operations. (Canadian MSO's are listed in the following directory.) Attorneys and headquarters addresses and other interests may appear here, rather than under the individual system's listings. If a cable owner has broadcast interests, reference is made to the "Broadcasters in Cable TV" directory which is in Section D on page D-312.
